It is unfair to bring in the drunkard who neglects his family, and makes an ass of himself, as a fair specimen of that independent class of men who drink intoxicating liquers. As well bring in the dyspeptic as a sample of those who cal. While millions of men eat and enjoy their food, there is an occasional dysceptic who cannot be controlled to the cannot be controlled to the cannot be controlled to the cannot be ca who drink intolicating industs. As well bring in the dysopolitic as a sample of those who call there is an occasional dysopolitic who cannot regulate his appetite, and hence anflers pain where he ought to experience sensations of pleasure. The same is true of drink. We know in our own experience of thousands of men who drink intoxicants regularly, and go about their work enjoying life and health, while once in a while we come across a drunkard who lives in perpetual misery. Here in this city there are a few tectotalers, and about the same number of drunkards, while nearly every other man, and many women, drink regularly, and many of our best citizens keep wine, whisky and beer on their sideboards. Now these men are not drunkards, and are not liable to become intemperate. They mind their own business, and have emough sense to take care of themselves. It is an insult to bring an old sot forward as a fair specimen of such man; as well make Guiteau a representative religionist. Believers in the churches and religion would think it very unfair if we were to insist on making Guiteau and other cranks the representatives of the church and the gospel. Suppose we should point to Guiteau and any there is a specimen of what religion will lead to, and exhert the people to turn away from God and the Bible, beganes it was too mach for the brain of a crank. This would be no worse than for tectotalers to trot out their old topera as the representatives of that liberal class of men who drink wine and enjoy life. Because intoxicants occasionally get away with a man who is too weak to govern himself, is no reason why all men should all walk.—Wichita Times.

BITTEN BY A BENEADED REPTILE.—Mr. Jack Helton, workman for the Chestatee Company, killed a large rattlesmake last week by cutting it in two, leaving a foot or more wish the head.
Mr. Helton undertook to examine the fangs of the serpent with a short stick, and was struck by the snake, or what was left of it, and its fangs came in contact with his hand, since which time the hand has been badly awollen, and throwing Mr. Helton into spasma. There is some chance for the bits to result fatally.—Sations A News.

Represent was asked why he fired at and killed to be a brakesoan on a train entering Walton, Ky., as the men were strangers, and not a word proceedod the deed. He replied, carclessly: "O, I folt like shooting, and shot." 345 345 a 100 ft 1 a 100 ft 2 all 3 a 20 ft 4 all 3 o 1 100 ft 4 all 3 # 10 all 11 22
